Inhalte	Tom Emerson's MA Architecture students have created a pavillion on the ETH Höngerberg campus. The pavilion is a garden with 2 divisions of space - one constructed, one growing. During this course we will form a curatorial team that will create the first exhibition / event series at the Pavilion while in conversation with Emerson's class. An exhibition, or a series of events, will be formed by you as a group through questioning the context in respect to the space and location, current discourses in contemporary art, politics, and the environment, as well as how to generate an audience through communication strategies. Threaded throughout the course will be historic and philosophical reference points of what a pavilion is or could be. We will be outside some of the time, potentially in cold wet weather, so please be hardy and willing to get dirty.
