Inhalte
 "Queer subjectivities as content and form."
 Charlotte Prodger works with moving image, printed image, sculpture and writing. She is interested in the intertextual relationships between each of these materials. Her work has used the legacies of structural film, minimalism and queer subjectivity to investigate tensions between language and material. Narrative fragments gleaned from different places and points of her life are shown in parallel, revealing an ongoing enquiry into the contingency and intimacy of materials. In recent years, she made the trilogy of films "Stonemollan Trail" (2015), "BRIDGIT" (2016) and "SaF05" (2019). This autobiographical cycle traces the accumulation of affinities, desires and losses that form a self as it moves forward in time. Moving image has been at the core of Prodger's work for two decades. Its ever-evolving formats are inextricably bound to her autobiographical content. Her work explores intertwined relationships between the body, landscape, language, technology and time.

The week will include:

- A series of screenings of Charlotte's films and the work of historical and contemporary artists such as Nancy Holt, Dani Leventhal and Jared Buckheister, James Richards and Carolyn Lazard
- Sharing a range of essays, autofiction and literary non-fiction such as Hilton Als, Lucia Berlin, Hollis Frampton and Harry Dodge

- Individual studio visits with students
