Inhalte	The main topic of this seminar is to refine feedback in creative processes. By using different methods, a respectful, sophisticated and – above all – productive use of feedback will be experienced and learned as an important part of creative work. The process within the group will be shown as a basic component for the creative development of individual work. How can these processes turn out to be productive for the individual? How do I change my way of looking at things in order to question and change them? The basics of communicative behaviour will be addressed as well as feedback formations as a tool for the own creative process and as a way to communicate a creative context. The students will be given the opportunity to introduce their individual creative concerns and topics.
